The Monastic Gift (Continued)

Men come [to Saint Anselm Abbey] seeking relief from their burdens, seeking a chance to relax, seeking relief from the pressure of their responsibilities, seeking “free time” since they have little of it in their regular lives, and yes, seeking peace. We speak a lot about how we are here to “seek God.” All of these things are part of that search in our lives. Those of us who live our lives here at the Abbey have been blessed by our God-given vocations. This way of life is one of the best ways available in the world to seek and find God in every aspect of our lives. We believe that this God for Whom we constantly seek has called us here and worked out all the details in our lives so that we could end up here and want to commit our lives to this place.

(Please note that we take a vow of “stability,” which means we stay here at Saint Anselm Abbey until death; we don’t get moved around. Think of what that incredible gift means to us, especially now when peoples’ lives are getting increasingly unstable and that it’s rare that anyone commits to work for any enterprise for 20, 30, 40 years.)
